Prepared4ALL: Disability Organizations Getting A Seat at the Local Emergency Planning Table

A project of the National Center on Disability in Public Health and the Association of University Centers on Disabilities (AUCD)

Prepared4all@aucd.org

May 13, 2021
Mission: Advance policies and practices that improve the health, education, social, and economic well-being of all people with developmental and other disabilities, their families, and their communities.

AUCD network helps people with disabilities overcome barriers to inclusion and wellness through research, training, service and advocacy.
Prepared4ALL

• Mission: Capacity-building for local disability organizations to develop relationships with local government to increase disability inclusion in emergency and public health preparedness planning

• Primary audience: Disability organizations

  • Secondary audiences: emergency managers, public health professionals

Impacts of Disasters on People with Disabilities

Emergency Management: A System of Systems

- One size does not fit all – every state, region, and local community operates differently
- ALL have plans + emergency roles
- Higher levels don’t necessarily oversee or control lower levels
- Higher levels are supposed to coordinate with lower levels
- Overlap is inconsistent between geographic areas and levels
Prepared4ALL Program Components

1. Online Course

2. Partner (Affiliate) Town Hall Meetings
   (3rd Wednesday, 1pmET-2pmET)
   • Planners and others welcome!

3. Student and Trainee Disability Inclusion Coaches
Prepared4ALL developed based on:

- Emergency and public health preparedness planner survey (61 respondents)
- Key informant interviews with experts (5 interviewees)
- 300+ resources scanned (trainings, informational documents, tools, templates, webinars, reports)
- Lit review
- Key finding: Limited info about the “how” and the “why”
We Asked Emergency Managers and Public Health Preparedness Personnel About Disability Inclusion....

• Community members with disabilities were ranked as the most useful resource for local emergency planning, but only 25% of respondents reported engaging them as a resource

• Disability community often lacks context on:
  • Emergency planning process and emergency management system
  • Emergency manager and public health preparedness roles

• Local government planners often lack context on:
  • Legal obligations under ADA and meeting access and functional needs during emergencies
  • Including people with disabilities in whole community planning

• Local government staff often feel short on time, money, staff but are open to partnerships with the disability community—they just may not know how to engage
Emergency Managers & Public Health Preparedness Personnel Tell Us

• “It's a two-way street. We need to keep in mind about people with disabilities and they need to make sure local emergency management knows what their needs are.”

• “Include emergency managers in the regular planning for organizations that support” people with disabilities

• Involve local emergency managers. Don't go around them.”

• “There is typically very little in the way of dialogue between EMs and these types of organizations. It would be hugely beneficial for these groups to seek out EMs and begin discussions about inclusiveness.”

(Emergency Managers and Public Health Preparedness Planners surveyed October 2020)
Local emergency planning is better when it’s Prepared4ALL...

4ALL: Same Time Access To Everyone (STATE)
All local partners own and share the issue
The Action Team meets with the public health planner before the clinic to confirm whether the clinic will be 4ALL, asking:

(1) Accessible space?
(2) Inclusive clinic process?
(3) Accommodations?
(4) Accessible communications?
(5) Inclusive philosophy?
(6) Cultural competence?
(7) Awareness of community needs?

After the clinic they work together to create an After Action Report to record lessons learned.

• A La Carte Suggestions:
  • Inclusive emergency planning how to: Lessons 7 & 8
  • Disability demographics, communication and accessible meetings: Lesson 5
  • Background on the emergency management system and ADA requirements: Lessons 4 & 6
  • Disaster & COVID-19 impacts and legal rights: Lessons 3 & 6
  • Prepared4ALL approach-Engagement/collaboration strategies: Lessons 1 & 2
This course is designed to increase your knowledge about whole community emergency planning, including COVID-19 planning, as well as provide you the basic information needed to connect with your own local emergency planners, public health professionals, and community.

In the course you will take on the role of “Terrye Trainee,” from Tornado Gap County, USA. Terrye is a professional from Tornado Gap’s local disability organization, Access & Equity, Inc. Tornado Gap’s county government and local disability and other community organizations want to collaborate to identify and close emergency planning gaps related to people with disabilities, chronic and mental health conditions. Terrye has heard about Disasterville’s inclusive emergency planning success and is visiting neighboring Disasterville to learn from their work.

Key Messages

- Prepared4ALL Goal: The Prepared4ALL initiative aims to mobilize disability organizations and their networks to foster connections with local emergency and public health professionals. We want to help disability organizations “get a seat” at the emergency planning table.
- Prepared4ALL approach: Prepared4ALL helps disability organizations increase their knowledge about and capacity for involvement in emergency planning efforts in their local community.
- Getting involved in Prepared4ALL: Let us help you work smarter! Prepared4ALL helps you leverage the resources, personnel, and skills you already have to then get involved in local emergency preparedness efforts.

Finding Your Local Emergency Planning Agencies

This example shows that the emergency management and public health systems are operated not only separately at every level but are also governed by different agencies. Although not every state, county, city, or town has all of these levels, they will all operate in their own unique way. Understanding the basics of the way your local emergency efforts are organized is important in reaching the appropriate people to make effective connections.

Finding your Local Contacts
Finding your local emergency management and public health offices:
- Look at the county government website, or if your state does not have a strong county system, look at the local city or town websites
- Contact the county commissioner’s office, city or town hall
- Visit the National Association for City and County Officials (NACCHO) online local health department directory: https://www.naccho.org/membership/lhd-directory

Finding your Local Emergency Plan
- Your city, town or county may have more than one emergency plan
  - May be one or more plans written by the public health department and one or more plans written by the emergency management department
  - Other departments may also write emergency guidelines

The Prepared4ALL Difference

• Audiences
  • Disability organizations
  • Emergency and public health preparedness planners

• Approach
  • The “how” and the “why”
  • Strategies to build engagement, collaboration capacity (the Wheel)
  • Informed by experts and well-known successful public health approaches
  • Engagement and collaboration tools

• Peer to peer support and problem solving (the Town Hall meetings)
• Student and trainees support local EP work today and build future sustainability
Prepared4ALL
Outcome: Partnerships
A “seat at the table”

• Will look different for each community

• Examples:
  • Participate in a local emergency planning meeting (literally a seat at the table)
  • Submit comments on the local emergency plan
  • Work with partners to identify gaps in your local emergency plan and strategize about how to close the gaps
  • Share information about how to find qualified sign language interpreters for emergency shelters or vaccine dispensing sites
  • Review alerts, warnings, public education and other communications intended for the disability community
